International Flower Show Interests Fashionable Set

Members of Junior League Will Serve as Waitresses in Tea Garden, the Proceeds From Which Go to Social Service Department of Bellevue Hospital

Many affairs of interest to society are scheduled for this week—the last but one before Easter—the majority of them being in behalf of some worthy charity. The one which probably will draw the fashionable world in the largest numbers is the International Flower Show, beginning tomorrow and lasting until one week from today, at the Grand Central Palace. Society's chief interest in the show will be in the Tea Garden, the proceeds from which will go to the Social Service Department of Bellevue Hospital. Then, of course, there is much interest in the exhibits of various amateur horticulturists who are prominent socially.

The garden will be attractive with a series of cedar alcoves, with an indoor effect, arranged on the sides of a central aisle. The walls will be hidden by green cedars. The ceiling will be a sky effect, hung in the form of a tent, with pale blue and lavender drapery. Large orange lanterns, covered with smilax, are to be hung from the ceiling and in the center of the garden will be a stately group above a running fountain, the latter filled with water lilies and other flowers.

Several other groups of statuary will adorn parts of the garden. Included in these will be "Chinoise," a bronze by Mrs. Harry Payne Whitney, and "The Shivering Girl," a green piece by Malvina Hoffman. Flowers, bay trees, palms and other horticultural decorations will be in profusion. Some of the new flowers and prize plants also will be shown, including the blue sweet pea named for Mrs. Warren C. Harding, the Madame Butterfly rose named for Miss Geraldine Farrar and the Florence Spindell rose.

The entrance to the garden will be flanked by two groups of statuary. The garden will be flanked by two groups of statuary.

Stage Stars to Appear
On Opening Day of Show

The artists for the opening day of the Tea Garden will be Miss Julia Arthur, Miss Ina Claire, Mme. Alma Laybourn, Miss Grace La Rue, Arnold Daly, Halse Hamilton and others.

One of the attractions of the show will be a display of articles from The Bug-Out, 150 East Sixty-first Street, all made by wounded soldiers. The Bug-Out was opened last November under the auspices of the National League for Women's Service and gives handicapped veterans a chance to keep busy making novelties by weaving, carving, basketry and other occupations of a light nature.

In addition to a series of tableaux depicting famous boys of history and literature, in which members of the Junior League will pose, more than a score of members and one-time members of the league will sell programs for the annual entertainment of the Boys' Club of New York, at the Hippodrome this evening. The tableaux have been arranged by Ben Ali Haggin, assisted by Mrs. Lydia Hoyt and Mrs. W.
